With our Overnight Plays event all set to begin early in 2020 we instead faced postponement and the theatre's government-mandated closure thanks to the Covid-19 crisis. But the Questors would not go gently into that good night. Instead we drew up plans to gather a smaller cast together online and make theatre, challenging though it seemed. It's testimony to the strength of our friendships and our community – and no small thanks to Zoom videoconferencing – that we were able to create and stream online a version of the Overnight Plays, our first Overnet Plays. We were watched from as far away as Toronto and Ohio across the Atlantic, our audience sitting in front of their computers, phones and tablets sharing this theatre performance with us.

May this be the only time we ever need to isolate ourselves in these circumstances, but the manner in which everyone involved dedicated themselves to this event should be a lasting testimony to our enduring love of making theatre together.
